About Positive Change

It all began with (very) angry mothers. In the summer of 2012, fed up with a rash of gun violence that plagued Toronto's Somali-Canadian community, a group of concerned mothers came together with a simple objective: to stop their sons from dying.

Fueled by their passion for change, they formed Positive Change, an ad hoc advocacy group dedicated to getting to the root causes of violence in our city. Through meaningful advocacy work with key allies in our city, Positive Change hopes to address a simple question with a complex answer: how did we get here?

Thank you for your interest in helping us create positive change. Please fill out this form and e-mail to positivechangeto@gmail.com.

How did you hear about Positive Change?

The great majority of Positive Change's members are volunteers. It is important that all volunteers are dedicated, reliable and willing to work within a team to help us continue to meet our goals.

All volunteers will be required to attend an orientation session and must sign a commitment pledge upon completing the session. If you have any questions, please e-mail positivechangeto@gmail.com.
